Although Rockwell's material safeguards protect against shipping products of unacceptable quality, a small surface indentation or imperfection, which can not be observed at closer than arms length or are only observable when the product is rotated at an angle, by special observation, or when examined under certain lights, may not disqualify a particular product from being considered of the highest quality obtainable.

3. Distressed and oil rubbed bronze finishes are not covered under this warranty.

Stainless Steel Hardware Care and Maintenance

The Stainless Steel Handles are manufactured of Austenitic 304 series Stainless Steel. Stainless Steel is very resistant to rust but it is not impervious to it. It must be kept clean and free from contaminants. Frequent cleaning with a mild soap and water is required. At times, Stainless Steel products may develop spots of discoloration or corrosion due to environmental or application conditions. Any discoloration needs to be removed asap. It is usually possible to restore the product to its original condition. Most discoloration can be removed with a mild cleanser or stainless steel cleaner. The surface should then be rinsed thoroughly with water.

In selecting cleaning practices, consider the possibility of scratching and the potential for post cleaning corrosion caused by incompletely removed cleaners. Select only cleaners that are not abrasive, not acidic, and low in chloride. Many antibacterial cleaners used to clean and sanitize door hardware contain high levels of chlorides, which will cause corrosion if not properly removed from the surface by rinsing. When water contains mineral solids, which leave water spots, it is advisable to wipe the surface completely with dry towels.

With care and proper maintenance, the Stainless Steel handles will maintain its aesthetics, luster and appearance for many years.
